2025 Training Catalog

As Concilium's training ministry enters its second decade, we praise the Lord for the opportunity to have trained and equipped more than six thousand gospel workers globally including missionaries, humanitarian workers, and persecuted Christians in ten languages including American Sign Language.

Concilium provides training for traditional missionaries serving in open countries, restricted access workers serving in countries closed to the Gospel, humanitarian workers serving in complex and dangerous environments, and persecuted Christians living in countries that impose a great cost for following Jesus.

The foundation for all Concilium's courses is called Security in the Context of Ministry (SICM). SICM begins with a cornerstone of theology of risk which rights the foundation in both a theological and practical nature. Concilium's training is unique as we hold the Gospel as the highest value and the safety of God's people as the highest priority.

The goal of Concilium's training is to help Christians understand that effective service for Christ requires risk, and that the Lord has defined a process for gauging and mitigating risk using practical safety/security principles that are biblically based and Gospel centered.

When privately contracted, the SRCM can be run in conjunction with security management consulting and crafted to help mission organizations implement or improve their current security and crisis management programs. Also, Concilium often runs the SRCM course in conjunction with our Field Security Courses in Kansas City. This allows us to integrate the crisis management table top exercise with the final exercise of the FSC, providing an intensive real-world experience of crisis management with learning experiences that go beyond the classroom.

"Our calling as a ministry is to use security-risk and crisis management principles, tools, and resources to help Christians thrive where the Lord has called them and remain effective where He has planted them."
